“Laughter, love, lamentations and lager...” Set in a northern pub owned by a savagely bickering husband and wife, TWO is a series of short vignettes that skilfully combines pathos and humour, with all fourteen characters played by just two actors who drag us through the whole gamut of emotions. These amazing parts should leave the performers breathless and the audience stunned, silent and scratching their heads wondering how it was all done. During the course of the evening in this pub, assorted customers pass in and out; including the hilarious Alice and Fred who've “never been the same since Elvis died” and the abusive husband and his terrified partner whose power struggle is one of the most emotionally charged scenes. Towards the end, a little boy is left behind by his father—an event which triggers a movement towards a fragile reconciliation between the pub couple, as their own dark tragedy is revealed. All these characters are linked by the bar, but also by their battle with love and their conflicts between public facade and private emotion. This is a hilarious and moving play and is guaranteed to touch a nerve. You'll laugh, you'll cry, you have a pint!
